Bio

As a partner in the firm's Litigation Department and Financial Services Group, Gerry Gaeng has successfully handled some of the region's largest and most complex litigation matters, in state and federal trial and appellate courts, as well as in arbitrations and mediations. He concentrates in complex business and government litigation, including class-action defense, financial services litigation, intellectual property litigation, administrative law, commercial tort and contract litigation, higher education law, and real estate and construction litigation. Gerry graduated summa cum laude from Towson University and received the "Most Outstanding Student" award at the Emory University School of Law. He served as a federal judicial law clerk, Maryland Assistant Attorney General, and counsel to a congressionally created commission that investigated the nation's savings and loan crisis of the 1980s.

During his decades of private practice, Gerry has been recognized in a short list of Maryland's "local litigation stars" in every annual edition of Benchmark: America's Leading Litigation Firms and Attorneys, where clients have praised him for "astounding results" and described him as "simply the best." Similarly, he has been listed in every edition of Maryland Super Lawyers and in the 2011-present editions of Best Lawyers in America, which named him Baltimore's 2016 "Lawyer of the Year" for Litigation – Banking and Finance, and its 2021 Baltimore "Lawyer of the Year" for Real Estate Litigation. Gerry is also ranked for commercial litigation in Maryland in the prestigious Chambers USA publication.
